CRIMINALS URGES BOSTON TO JOIN NEW ENGLAND TO 'FIGHT CRIMES'

Mayor Says That Joint Action Alone Can Win Success Against All Competitors

Boston and New England industry must wage battle together instead of separately if they wish to compete against the south and west—or even against Europe.

Mayor Curley made this declaration today in his office to 40 business men of the city with whom he conferred relative to the situation of a Boston commercial, industrial and publicity bureau.

The projected bureau was endorsed heartily by the business men and they promised the Mayor full co-operation.

At conclusion of the meeting, the Mayor said it was far more successful than he had expected and that he hoped "something will be done immediately to put Boston on the map where she belongs."

PLAN COMMITTEE. He said he will shortly appoint three members of the new bureau, one to be a director of publicity, another a director of commerce and the third a director of industrial activities.

Then he will ask each railroad and steamship company, the Chamber of Commerce and the Boston Real Estate Exchange to appoint one member each, making up a bureau of not more than 15 members.

At the meeting Mayor Curley and several other speakers commented on his plan for a Greater Boston. In this connection he distributed copies of the Boston Evening American, edited by the Mayor, and said that it explained his attitude and ideas thoroughly.

"We in Boston," said the Mayor, "have been exceedingly generous in meeting a situation the seriousness of which is not realized by many persons."

"While the West has been organizing with its firm and definite plan, the South has been coming forward by leaps and bounds. We in Boston have been standing still."

"At a time when the country is stronger than the rest of the world politically, at a time when the President of the country came from this section as we were standing still."

TEXTILE MILLS GONE. "We have witnessed the transfer of the textile industry from Massachusetts to another section of the country. At present we are in the same condition of flux when it comes to boats and shoes."

"If we had a Greater Boston, with a thorough system similar to that of the County Council, we might have secured more concerted action from our representatives in Congress."

The Mayor spoke of Lowell, Lawrence, Hingham and Fitchburg and said that while their area was and is powerful politically in Congress, their communities were going backward.

"We do not see anybody in Washington now representing New England. There is no one in the shoe and hat industry," he said.

"This business is the lifeblood of this section because of the invasion of the markets by the Swiss and the German. The trouble here has been that each industry has made a separate fight, instead of all making a concerted fight. I would like to see something. We are slipping back and I would like to see the way out."

BEST AIRPORT IN WORLD. The Mayor declared that he intends to spend $1,000,000 this year on the Boston airport, the only one in the world that will give the city use and control of Governors Island.

In this event, 3,000 acres of land will be reclaimed from mud flats and the airport and Governors Island connected by the filled-in land.

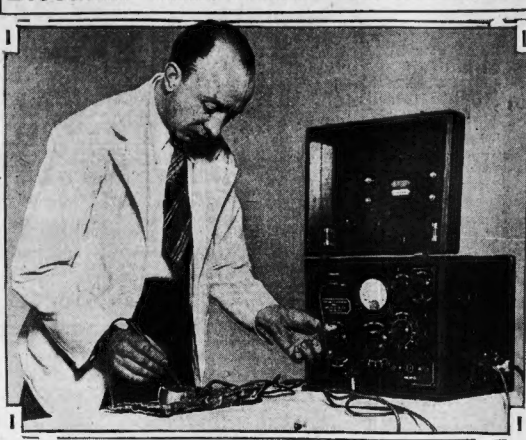

"I believe it is possible," he said, "within the next two years to make the Boston airport the best in the world. United States. If not in the world. At a passenger station it is of questionable value. I believe it ought to be linked up with industry."

Twenty-one years ago today a young wireless operator named Jack Binns flashed the first appeal for aid through the air that saved a stricken ship at sea.

By a good right hand that calmly clicked the key of his cruciform on the White Star liner Republic, he sprang into a frame that lasts even to today—two decades later.

Binns was an obscure operator, but he was a hero of the night. It was on the night of January 23, 1909, that he was crowned a world hero the next day, when newspapers told of his sterling work at the key and the rescue of 800 passengers after collision with the Italian steamship Florida.

Both vessels were groping through fog southeast of Nantucket. Lightly when a flickering turn turned the ship into a veritable mass of hurtling passengers.

ON POST 30 HOURS. With his radio shack unroofed in the crash, Binns, then 26 years old, strapped a headset on and sat for more than 30 hours, clicking out messages of help, hope and direction. He finally "talked" with the French steamer La Lorraine and the British steamer Ballie.

Everything hung upon the steadiness of his finger on the key. The Republic was plunged into total darkness and panic-stricken passengers were pleading with each other for just one word of encouragement.

All about the ship an imperative blur shrouded the vessel in a blanket that only the ether waves could pierce.

Binns had harnessed a storage battery onto his set, and the motors went dead and bridged the gap in his talk to the other ships by the famous message, "Back on the job. Ship sinking; but will stick to the end."

The Republic reached the Baltic coast in the gray of dawn. She was rounding Nantucket shoals when city go ahead messages came. Then started a game of ocean hide and seek, during which the two lost each other and again picked up Binns' message.

The Mayor declared that he intends to spend $1,000,000 this year on the Boston airport, the only one in the world that will give the city use and control of Governors Island.

First Radio Hero Jack Binns, wireless operator of the ill-fated Republic of the White Star Line, who 21 years ago today flashed the first air call for help that resulted in a rescue.

'RADIO KNIFE' FOR SURGERY

Science's latest boon to suffering humanity, a bloodless "radio knife" for surgery, is being perfected.

Meanwhile the Florida was taking passengers aboard and had a gaping hole in her side, she could not afford to overload.

The message clicked on. "Star northeast," Binns instructed, and all on a weak net powered by accumulators that gave him a sending force of less than 50 miles.

Powerful shore stations were crossing their message, and meant of course, but interfering greatly with the flow between the stricken ship and her would-be rescuer.

RESCUE EFFECTED. Finally contact was made through a series of instructions and the passengers were taken aboard. The Republic before the Republic sank into a watery grave.

When "Tattertail" and Binns met aboard the Ballie, the latter remarked on the "brisk" time they had of it.

The historic call for help was given in the old code that prescribed CQD as the danger signal. A few years later it was superseded by the now familiar SOS.

The call went out from an old style "spark" station at the Gloucester radio station.

It was the first time the call was ever received him out of the ether, but he lost no time in sending his message to the Republic.

From the first, when the messages flew fastest, through the period of "backing batteries" about the Republic that reduced her sending range to a few miles, "boom," as the station was known, flashed the relayed messages to the Ballie and other ships hastening to the crippled Republic.

"WORK IN SHIPS" When Irwin was exhausted, another took his place. Chief Operator A. H. Ginnam assumed duty. It was made early this morning by physicians at Woonsocket Hospital.

Red Cross Workers Making New Efforts to Rescue Arkansas Families

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 23 (AP)—Rescue crews, defeated in their attempts by frozen flood waters, prepared to set out again today to rescue families from the big Lake Arkansas.

Reports from the stricken territory to Walter Over, national Red Cross representative at Elberton, said many marooned families were without food and short of fuel and that sickness had broken out in some places. The weather was near zero in part of the area.

A few of the several hundred families and those marooned in the Big Lake area were said to be clinging to the roofs of their submerged houses, exposed to the sleet, snow and wind.

Rescue airplanes were to fly over the area today to attempt a survey of the situation. Food was to be dropped if necessary.

Rescue crews under direction of the Red Cross and equipped with flood float-SOS control signal, tried to go to the sufferers, but found water on the edge of the flooded territory.

About 200 families in the Big Lake area headed for higher ground, leaving their homes and belongings and left their homes as the levees broke and the water came in.

They were housed in box cars and tents.

New York Collector Retorts No Evidence Given in the Responsibility Charge

New York, Jan. 23 (AP)—The Evening World today quoted Philip H. H. collector for the port of New York, as saying that prohibition agents last summer asked him to issue a customs seizure warrant for a quantity of liquor they charged Herbert Pratt, chairman of the board of the Standard Oil Co. of New York, had brought into this country illegally.

Mr. Pratt, the Evening World said, is the man the Anti-Saloon League of New Jersey charges in an affidavit sent to President Hoover brought $25,000 worth of champagne into this country last spring. They said the importation was discovered and he surrendered the wine, but had never been fined or punished in any other way.

The federal authorities, they said, had had unhappy experiences in two previous cases where they had granted such a request," said Eiting. "The courts had quashed the affidavits and the agents had been forced to return the seized liquor. So we asked evidence which would assure us that the identity of the packages which the former customs employee who had been dismissed for bootlegging."

After a conference with the S. A. L. Y., Robert B. Watts it was agreed that we did not have sufficient proof of guilt.

"Apparently Mr. Pratt surrendered the liquor, but he was demanding a warrant. Incidentally, if a search warrant is issued, agents would have had to arrest Mr. Pratt, according to my information."

"If we had been informed, we could have made a case against the United States attorney."

The charges against Mr. Pratt were included in an affidavit the Anti-Saloon League sent to President Hoover asking to block the reappointment of Col. Arthur J. Fox, a customs employee who had been dismissed for bootlegging.

Grand told police he and a companion were rowing along the river front looking for a missing subboat.

He said neither he nor his companion was armed and that there was no liquor on the boat. He said he was shot without warning.

With a bullet wound in his stomach, Grand fell back into the boat which his companion headed out to the river front.

M. J. SENATORS BACK FORAN IN SPITE OF RAIDS

Washington, Jan. 22 (AP)—Over the protest of the Anti-Saloon League, Senators Kean and Baird, Republicans, New Jersey, today yielded in recommending the reappointment of Col. Arthur F. Foran as commissioner of customs at the port of New York.

Both senators were indignant over a raid on Foran's hunting lodge at Mount Airy, N. J., and Senator Baird described the incident as an "outrage."

Col. Foran, who is a Catholic, described the raid on his lodge as a "political and religious plot."

The united support of the two Republican Senators from New Jersey is regarded as giving Foran an advantage in the contest that has developed over his reappointment. His term expires January 31.

The recommendations today came in the midst of investigation of charges made yesterday by the Anti-Saloon League of New Jersey that Col. Foran had been lax in enforcement of the prohibition law at New York and was personally sympathetic to the law.

The recommendation came quickly after Foran had called off upon Assistant Secretary Lowman and Senators Kean and Baird. The charges by the Anti-Saloon League that Foran was venial in his duties were sent to the Treasury Department by President Hoover, who had received the affidavits from James H. Shields, State Superintendent of the New Jersey.

Lowman said the charges were under investigation and promised a statement today.

A description of the New Jersey hunting lodge of Foran, in which he is charged by Shields with serving liquor, is contained in an affidavit by Harold Nadel, private investigator, which Shields made public today.

The document was accompanied by pictures said to have been taken at Foran's hunting lodge at Mount Airy, showing what were set out in the affidavit to be a bar, gambling machines and bottles.

GIRL TELLS OF '36 PROPOSALS' BY ROTHSTEIN

New York, Jan. 23 (AP)—Testimony that Arnold Rothstein proposed once a week, or perhaps three dozen times in all, was given in Supreme Court by Inez Norton, former show girl, who is seeking to collect a $20,000 insurance policy on the slain gambler's life.

The policy originally had been made out to "the estate of Arnold Rothstein," but later the name of "Inez Norton" as beneficiary was written in instead. The insurance company said it never received any notice of a change of beneficiary and paid the money to the court.

Mrs. Norton testified that two months after meeting Rothstein, in 1928 or about five months before his death, he turned the policy over to her. She said their relations had been platonic but that they planned to obtain divorces and marry.

Questioned on the number of times Rothstein proposed marriage, she said, "I'd say once a week."

"A dozen times in all?" she was asked. "Yes."

"Three dozen?"

"Perhaps."

ASK SHIPS OF 2 NATIONS TO 'RESCUE' BYRD

Washington, Jan. 23.—The aid of Great Britain and Norway was asked today by the State Department which is concerned over the predicament of Admiral Richard E. Byrd's Antarctic expedition apparently marooned in Little America.

The government asked that ships of both nations now in the Ross ice barrier, which is blocking the progress of two Byrd fleets, be sent to take off the air explorer and his party.

Unless Admiral Byrd receives assistance within 30 days the expedition will probably have to remain in the Antarctic another year, with supplies already seriously diminished, the department has learned. The City of New York and the USS Itasca, the Byrd ships, are not scheduled to reach the northern edge of the ice pack until about January 28, by which time, it is feared, the condition of the barrier will not allow their passage through.

Even if they pierce the barrier, it is felt they will not certainly be caught inside with the "freesees." In which case there would be more supplies available but at much larger force of men.

British and Norwegian whaling ships are now within striking distance of the Byrd base and the State Department hopes that one or more of them be sent in the emergency. It is expected that his men from their position, fraught with considerable danger.

The city of New York is estimated to be about 525 miles north of the base at Little America. Aid was asked by the Government following notification by Capt. H. H. Bailey of the seriousness of the situation. Capt. Bailey, the radio operator of the ship, the ship of New York, had reached the base.

In telegrams to the American ambassador in London and the minister at Oslo, Acting Secretary Cotton said the state department had been informed that the vessel of the Byrd expedition, the USS Itasca, was able to negotiate passage to Little America to bring out Admiral Byrd with his men and equipment.

PARTY FACING DANGER. Should the party not be brought out, Mr. Cotton said, it was believed a serious situation might confront the explorers as their food supply would run low.

They Norwegian ships and one British vessel are in the neighborhood of the Byrd expedition, all believed to be capable of penetrating the ice pack. One of these, the Nilsen-Almone, a Norwegian whaler, was reported steaming north through the pack. Mr. Cotton said "its master having declined to assist Admiral Byrd without direct orders from his owners."

It has been reported to the department, the telegram to Mr. Swannson at Oslo said, "that unless Admiral Byrd receives assistance within 30 days no vessel of any character could be of great help to insure the safe passage, the expedition should be brought out within 15 days."

QUICK ACTION NEEDED. "Please take up this matter at once with the foreign office and request that the Norwegian government use its good offices to induce the above-mentioned Norwegian whaling company immediately to designate one of their vessels to order the master to proceed to Little America and transport the 40 men who are there and their equipment to the Byrd expedition's own vessel north of the ice pack."

The relief vessel should get under way at the earliest possible moment and not in any circumstances later than February 5.

the abduction story as a hoax, he announced.

"My opinion is that the girl violated some of the college rules, possibly needed an alibi and 'led it on' too heavily," said the State detective, who began an investigation on his own initiative.

"I have a hunch that the two young men were well known to her and I would not be at all surprised if the other girl was a college mate of the 'kidnaped mystery girl'." The college reports that she was back at 8:40 p. m. Thursday night and so had nothing to hide and no reason for an alibi. But I know the campus police were securing the countryside as late as 4 a. m. Wednesday.

"When I inquired the reason for their being out, President Neilson said he hoped the car might be around the campus."

Lieut. Dancy said that with regard to the girl's identity he had been able to learn only that she was a senior who had been a first-rate student and never in any trouble.

CHOSSEY IN SORDID DRY CASE FOUND

By WOOSTER TAYLOR

Correspondent, Boston Post, Boston, Jan. 23.—Henry Miller has been found.

The long-hunted "ghost witness" in the Sue Brown case was located by the San Francisco Examiner. He is Wesley Owen Patton, an auto mechanic of Monterey.

He is a "under cover" agent by night, working by direction of Sheriff Carl Abbott, who has been asserting all along that he never set eyes on him and under the order of D. M. Laughery, the six-foot three deputy sheriff, who broke in the door of Mrs. Brown's home and dragged her off to jail for possession of three cases of home brew.

He admits that he was a house guest of the Browns.

He admits partaking of the hospitality of the Browns.

He admits attempting to "frame" the Browns, under the guise of friendship.

He admits the proceedings under the Brown Brown was jailed are illegal.

BOGUS AFFIDAVIT. The whole sickening "confession" has come from the lying lips of the agent whose plan was to collect 20 per cent of the fine he thought would be imposed upon the expectant mother.

That the premature baby was born dead in the filthy Salinas jail does not bother him.

His burden of his conversation is that he was "knocked out" a good piece of coin, he is most concerned with the question of whether he can still collect the money from the county.

Most astounding of his admissions is that, just as the attorney for Mrs. Brown suspected, he admitted a false sale was never sworn to before a justice of the peace.

The same "affidavit" which Sheriff Abbott used in other cases was used here, he admitted reluctantly.

"SIGNED AFFIDAVIT." "I signed the sworn affidavit in Deputy Sheriff Laughery's home," he declared.

"It was late in the afternoon and they told me that they could not get in touch with the judge, but it would be all right."

"So I signed it. It there in Laughery's home, just as though I was standing up in front of the justice with my right hand raised and swearing to it according to law."

This is the face of repeated statements of Justice of the Peace Ray Baugh, who sentenced the young mother, that the man who signed the affidavit had appeared in person.

Patton declared that the affidavit had already been signed—that it bore the signature of Justice Baugh.

Ever since Mrs. Brown was arrested and the hue and cry arose over the way the young mother was jailed, Patton says he has been warned by repeated phone calls from Laughery to "lay low and keep his mouth shut."

He was located by the Examiner through frantic efforts of the Monterey county officials "to cover up."

He confessed despite his own vehement denials and those of his wife, when the clue first led to his door.

BENEFIT BALL IN CAMBRIDGE NEXT WEEK

IT WOULD SEEM AS THOUGH the social season were at a standstill so very little is going on, except for small luncheons and dinners. The next day of note on Boston's calendar is January 21. That evening the greater part of the smart set will be dancing there being three parties scheduled. The debutantes will be at the presentation dance which the Rev. and Mrs. Howard S. Barlow of Quincy are giving in honor of their daughter, Miss Catherine Barlow, in the Princess ballroom of the Somerset. A number of people will be in attendance at the costume ball at Brattle Hall in Cambridge—this is an invitation subscription affair to benefit the Cambridge Welfare Union, previously known as the Associated Charities of Cambridge. And last but not for least, the Senior Supper dance will draw a large group of Boston's most select residents to the large ballroom at the Copley Plaza. Mr. and Mrs. G. Winthrop Brown of Suffolk rd., Chestnut Hill are having a dinner at the Algonquin Club for Mrs. Mary Joseph Ewart, debutante daughter of the Walter Evans of Brookline. After dinner the party will proceed to the theater and from thence to the Barlow's dance.

IT IS WITH INTEREST THAT Miss Constance Harper's many friends have heard that she is planning on Easter Sunday, April 21, for her wedding to Sydney F. Tyler, son of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Tyler of Elkins Park. The ceremony is to be performed in St. Michael's Church in Milton. Miss Harper's engagement was announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles March Hoe Harper, of Milton, in November.

INTERVIEWING PARROT ONE SWEET JOB

The apparent presumption of such an interview was not without valid excuse; one has these premises: that parrots talk, that parrots should know more about patacious than anybody else, that a talking parrot might explain the "how come" of parrot fever.

The reporter, eating about for a representative bird of the species, selected Jerry, the Franklin Park macaw.

Reporter (making the flattering approach)—Jerry, tell me about this parrot fever. You're a real bird. Most parrots are cleverly disguised creatures, lacking intelligence.

Jerry (sneaking)—So's your old man!

Reporter: As it was saying, Jerry, there's a gleam of wisdom in your eye. I'd like to have you around the house. I'd...

Jerry: more reason. That's the boloney!

Reporter: What's that?

Jerry: Boloney! Boloney!

Reporter: Listen, Jerry, old boy. What's in this patacious threat? It's up to you. These doctors and scientists are puzzling around and never getting anywhere.

Jerry: So's your old man!

Reporter: Look here, Jerry. Get organized. Fame and fortune await you if you get to mankind the cause and the cure of patacious. Think of the extra sunflower seeds. Think of the tribute. Think of all the folks stopping in front of your cage and saying, "That's the bird..."

Jerry (thrusting head forward)—That's the boloney!

Reporter (trying another tack): I don't think you know anything about patacious, Jerry. In fact, I think you're rather dumb.

Jerry (sneaking)—So's your old man!

Jerry: You're a blankety food and the dumbest bird on two legs!

Reporter (mimicking): That's

'Keeps' Fever Secrets

Jerry, Franklin Park macaw, foiled all efforts of a Boston Evening American reporter to get the "low-down" on parrot fever. "So's your old man" and "boloney" were some of his replies to questions.

$1500 Fire Damage In School at Saugus

The Ballard school in East Saugus was damaged to the extent of $1500 by a fire which broke out after the 400 pupils had gone home. Mrs. Pauline Peckham, the principal, with several teachers, was eating a light luncheon in her office when one of them, Miss Lenora H. Conlinson, smelled smoke. She found the kindling wood bin in the basement ablaze.

$12,884,000,000 in Life Policies Made Out in 1929

New York, Jan. 23.—New business done in 1929 by 44 life insurance companies, representing 91 per cent of the country's production in this field, reached the record-breaking total of $12,884,000,000, an increase of 31 per cent over 1928.

The Association of Life Insurance Presidents in reporting the figures today, said that with the exception of May, September and December, new life insurance increased in every month of last year.

The association's help problem is solved by taking a life insurance contract and the local advertisement in the first date column.

Auction Bidding South 1 NT West Pass North Pass East Pass

Contract bidding 1st Rd. 2nd Rd. 3rd Rd. South 2 NT 6 NT West Pass Pass Pass North 2 NT 6 NT East Pass Pass Pass

The above hand is one that arose in the Duplicate Auction contest for teams of four at the annual congress of the American Whist League in Atlantic City. At two tables South bid and played the hand at Hearts, failing to go game.

At the tables where it was played at No Trumps, but two South players made the small slam, which is easily made in the hand if played for.

Salient Points of the Bidding: Auctioner South's hand, by reason of its high card strength, is a Quick Trick and 4-4-3-2 type of suit distribution is distinctly a No Trump to start with, and a Heart was bid. North left in this bid with the result that bid nine tricks were made instead of the 12 that can be made at No Trumps.

Contract: The contract bidding is purely hypothetical as the contest was Auction, not Contract. At Contract, the Heart can be bid with safety as with 8's distributed high card values. South can bid two hearts originally. As this bid demands a response by partner, there is little or no danger that South will not be provided with a second opportunity to bid, and thus arrive at the best bid of the combined hands for game or slam.

Salient Points of Play: West opens the Seven of Hearts, which South wins with the Ten. With this opening, South can count positively 11 tricks, four Hearts, three Spades, two Diamonds and two Clubs. To set up the needed 12th trick for a Small Slam is the problem. To attempt

Chevrolet Dealers Gather for Winter Meeting

Chevrolet dealers, associated bankers and star salesmen from the Boston and Portland zones are gathered in Boston for their annual winter meeting. Pictured above in a group on their arrival at the Huntington ave. station. Rear row, left to right, H. L. Davidson, K. E. Gray, F. J. Hackett, H. L. Horton, H. J. Walsh, J. C. Russell, C. W. Treadwell.

DEALERS SEE CHEVROLET "DRAMAS"

The fashion in which selling, especially continuous selling, has developed in the past 20 years was graphically demonstrated in the Wilbur Theater during the annual winter dealer meeting being staged in Boston by the Chevrolet Motor Co.

More than 1000 Chevrolet dealers, associated bankers and star salesmen of Boston and Portland zones are in attendance at the meeting, the sixth of a series of 6 to be held throughout the United States. This evening they will be guests of the company at a banquet in the Statler Hotel.

PLAYERS USED

A series of playlets was used to dramatically outline the extensive methods now employed in selling automobiles, showing the contrast with the indifferent practices in vogue in the horse and buggy days. The playlets were staged with all the care and attention to detail of a Broadway revue. Specially constructed settings, elaborate and costly, were provided for each act. A special baggage coach was required to bring the motor scenery to Boston.

CONFUSED DEALERS

The factory men showed the dealer photographs or sketches of the new line. He presented pamphlets on the advantages of the new car and offered suggestions on how to sell. The bewildered dealer looked over the literature with a skeptical eye. He was not certain that the suggestions were right or suitable, nor certain even if the new car was an improvement over the old. "Today the alert manufacturer sends into the field trained factory officials schooled in every phase of retail automobile marketing," said J. T. Collins, general sales manager of the Olds Motor Co. "They have no literature, paint, nor verbal phrases. Instead, they use the actual car. They visualize every function of a dealership. By implication and indirectness in the most efficient fashion possible. By implication and indirectness he is shown how he can improve himself, his business, his profits."

Low Lined Bodies on New Oakland

New bodies, whose long low lines, harmonizing colors and sparkling chrome trimmings reflect the master touch of Fisher craftsmen, appropriately grace the powerful chassis of the new Oakland as it enters the field of V-type eight. The choice of seven smartly styled bodies is offered, each presenting distinctive elements of beauty and appeal. The new body line includes five closed and two open models—the four-door sedan, custom sedan, two-door sedan, coupe, sport coupe, phaeton and sport roadster. The sport roadster and the sport coupe both provide access to the rear for extra passengers in comfortable, deeply-cushioned rumble seats.

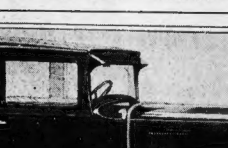

Regular Munson Service to Bermuda

Effective with the south-bound sailing from New York of the S. S. American Legion tomorrow the Munson Steamship Line will maintain a regular service between New York and Bermuda.

The're Squeezing Waists in Paris

Paris, Jan. 22 (AP)—Advance slimmers at spring styles show that waists will be less in circumference and shoulders broader.

New Chevrolet Sedan

Many new features have been incorporated in the new Chevrolet six sedan. Chrome plated cowl lights with attractive chrome plated cowl molding have been added. The inclined windshield reduces light reflections to a minimum and the new shape of the window improves the appearance of the machine. The body is smartly finished in Boulevard mahoon, with black moldings, rear quarter and wheel.

A Wonderful Love Story by Author of 'Hollywood Girl,' 'Easy.'

What Has Happened Before Happiness and love revealed with Tom and Lovejoy Nicholson during the first year of married life. The arrival of Tom brought more joy. There comes Mrs. Alina Alderson, who but less to son's words of discontent. Mrs. Alderson, husband's sister, Lovejoy is glad she has Tom who has youth and looks, if not money. Tom makes a big sale of bonds to Alderson. Mrs. Alderson calls to see the plans and talks to a woman. Lovejoy suspects she has an affair. That night all goes wrong at home. Now On With the Story

CHAPTER 15
TOM pushed open the bedroom door and stood on the threshold. There was an angry puzzled look on his face as his eyes searched Lovejoy's sleepy ones.

"What man would be telephoning you long distance?" he asked bluntly.

"No man," she said quickly. "Why?"

"Well, a long distance call just came in from South Port," he answered frowning. "And I heard a man talking to the operator. Then he said 'Hello' to me and when I answered he hung up."

Lovejoy was doing some quick thinking. The man who telephoned must have been Alina's Jack. She had told him yesterday to drive carefully to their meeting place because the roads were wet.

... and South Port was not a very easy driving distance of the town. "It must have been some one who got our number by mistake," she said, rubbing the sleep out of her eyes.

But Tom shook his head. "No, I tell you I heard him asking the operator for it, and he had it straightened out," he said.

"Seems funny he hung up the minute he heard a man's voice at this end. ... You're sure it wasn't some one you know?"

There was a trace of suspicion in his manner, and for a second Lovejoy was tempted to tell him about Alina and her sweetheart.

But she didn't. ... partly because she wanted the friendship of the Aldersons and partly because she was a good sport. ... and she did not like to see her friends, particularly when she had things about them simply by accident. ... That was Lovejoy's way of looking at it.

"Tom," she said gravely, "I don't know a man in South Port where this who would telephone me, and that's the truth. ... Don't I smell coffee?"

"He noddled."

"I made some, and I was going to set it here beside your bed. ... I thought it would do you good to sleep late once. I gave you a kid's bottle at 6 o'clock and he's been asleep ever since."

He looked out his watch and looked at it.

"Ten minutes past eight," he said quietly. "I'm late this morning. ... 10 minutes late. ... Funny how a man telephoned me and hung up. ... I'd be leaving the house."

Lovejoy was at his side and he was still suspicious, and anxious to get the side of her all at once.

"Now, look here," Nicholson said sharply. "You can't talk to me like that. I haven't any men friends, and there aren't any who call me up. So you can just keep your nasty suspicions to yourself."

ASKS SLAYERS BE DRAGGED GOING TO

Harvard Studies Business Papers of Noted Italian Family of 15th Century

Mrs. Lora L. Weston, secretary to Dr. Arthur H. Cole, administrative curator at Harvard's Graduate School of Business Administration, is looking over one of the books of the Medici family, famous in Italy in the 15th century. Insert shows a page of the Medici ledger. The cross over the top was expected to prevent dishonest entries, while the mark on the left denotes the ledger passed official inspection.

This is one of the Medici ledgers which have been loaned to Harvard and are being translated under the direction of Miss Gertrude R. B. Richards. The account books of the Medici family number about 150. They are all written by hand.

Rep. W. T. Day Sponsors Bill to Drug Them Ere They Go to Death Chair

Authorization for administering drugs to condemned murderers before execution, if they desire, was advocated at a hearing before the legislative committee on July 19th today by Representative W. T. Day of Great Barrington.

"No long as this State practices murder, let us make it as easy as possible for the condemned man," he pleaded.

The representative then denounced the present system of execution as long as "barbarous as the old system of killing by the guillotine."

"Adopt my bill in the interest of humanity so that highly temperamental and nervous men, upset at facing death, may have some support to lean on during the last moments of their lives."

He pointed out that the condemned is given every preference in food and other privileges during the last few days. He could see no reason why they should not be treated humanely through the use of drugs.

Deputy Commissioner of Correction Edward C. B. Reilly informed the committee that drugs are not administered in these cases because it is the wish of the department that the men who fear death should have full control of their sense during their talks with the prison chaplains with whom they spend most of their time in the last hours.

TWOHIG SCORES SEEK A BAN ON NEW 'L' BILL

Rep. James J. Twohig of South Boston today denounced a bill filed by Rep. George A. Gilman of Boston to direct the transit director and trustees of the Elevated to investigate, needs for additional transportation facilities and to report not later than March 1. Speaking before the legislative committee on street railways, Twohig charged that Gilman was attempting to divert and confuse public concentration on three issues connected with the road-rail private management, public control and public ownership—which the people are to vote on this fall. He warned the committee that the proposal for the investigation is backed by the public control group, who, while talking about relative new rapid transit plans, favor only route one and two. "For five years this legislation has been deadlocked on settlement of this whole question," he said. "With these new men on the transit trustee board, how are these men going to form an intelligent opinion before March 1?"

Church Home Society Aided 525 Children

The Church Home Society benefited 525 children in the past year, according to the report of Miss Katherine P. Hewins, executive director, at the annual meeting of the society.

Miss Hewins said it was a conservative estimate that altogether the society influenced the lives of between 1500 and 2000 children.

Business Tips in 15th Century Books

H. Gordon Selfridge, the merchant prince of London who introduced American department store methods in the British metropolis with tremendous success, has just loaned the graduate school of business administration at Harvard University a valuable collection of the family papers of the Medici family.

Selfridge purchased the papers at an auction in Christie's, London, in his search for material to authenticate stories of the Medici family.

The firm prospered however, and the account books, over 150 in number, list dealings in Spanish wool and leather, in gold and silver, and transactions are not only with merchants but with bankers, jewelers, and men of learning.

The paper in these old books is in excellent condition, being very heavy and still a creamy white color with a perfect water mark in the center of the page. It is hand made, probably of linen. In the margins of the audited account books are the signs of the notaries.

The majority of the work of translating is being done by Miss Gertrude R. B. Richards, at the Baker library in the Harvard school of business administration, which is under the direction of Arthur H. Cole, administrative curator. It is hoped to have one book of letters ready for publication later in the spring.

'BAWDY BOSTON' AUTHOR HERE

Walter W. Luzzett, author of "Bawdy Boston," has arrived in Boston prepared to appear tomorrow before United States Attorney Frederick H. Tarr in response to a subpoena.

He stated that he does not plan to discuss where he secured his information upon which his article was based or to reveal the identity of his informants or to give names of several notorious characters he mentioned as ruling the vice and liquor rackets in Boston.

"I am a newspaper man," he stated, "and I have a set of ethics to observe. The information I secured upon which I based my article was available to anyone, and it would be perfectly possible for federal investigators to obtain the same information. But the information I was given was privileged."

"I am not defiant of the federal authorities by any means," he stated, "but I intend to keep my information privileged."

SUSPECT FACES NEW CHARGES

Paul Smith of Malden, held in Salem jail for the murder of James Fendell, aged 84-year-old street sweeper, was arraigned in Judge Campbell Superior Court today on charges of "charge, of assault with intent to rob and murder."

His intended victims were Peter Pennington of Malden, and Gunter D. Medford of Malden, both accused in taking place New Year's Day, it is alleged.

Despite the fact he is under indictment for murder and is so entitled to bonds, Judge Sisk set bail on the three new charges at $30,000 before ordering him remanded to Salem jail.

Sees Modernism as Peril to Jerusalem

With a plant soon to be erected on the River Jordan to supply Jerusalem with electricity, the last vestiges of historical antiquity will be destroyed by a too-rapid industrialization of the Near East. This was the assertion of Prof. William E. Hocking of Harvard before 500 delegates to the Foreign Affairs school at the Hotel Commodore, Cambridge, today.

In discussing the mandate system in the Near East, Prof. Hocking declared the aspirations of the people are more important than the "paper" modernism made by Great Britain, and that he was not sure but that the destruction of ancient civilizations in the Near East and substituting our more strenuous conditions through rapid industrialism there will react to harm instead of good.

Airplane for Aviation Supervisor

Authorizing the State Department of Public Works to purchase and equip an airplane for the use of aviation section of the secretary of motor vehicles was urged at a legislative hearing today by Rep. Harold R. Tupper of Boston.

Tupper pointed out that the position of supervisor of aviation has been established, that his duties have been laid out to all sections of the State, and that he is without the proper means of investigating accidents. A suitable plane for the work, he estimated, could be purchased for about $10,000.

Jack Conway Picks Stecher to Win Tonight

Miami, Fla., Jan. 23.—When Jack Conway stepped off the Florida limited today he was greeted by a Western Union messenger boy.

"Telegram for Jack Conway," shouted the boy.

Opening the telegram, the Boston Evening American's champion picker read the following from Nick Platley: "In your wish to go out being don't forget to pick the winner of the Malcewicz-Stecher bout at the Arena, Thursday night."

"The you think Stecher can knock Malcewicz?" Jack asked the Western Union boy.

"Stecher could knock even me," chirped the youngster.

There about a telegram back to Boston and tell the folks at home that I'm picking Stecher to conquer Malcewicz at the Arena tonight, and that I'm wrong you can take the rap," Conway's latest record in the league of prophetic failures.

PITTED against the club which broke their string of 14 consecutive victories, the Bruins will show the fans a red-hot brand of hockey tonight at the Boston Garden when they tackle the New York Americans.

The Bruins are so far out in front in the race for top honors in their division that all that is necessary to stay in the fight is for them to go through the motions of hockey. But they will not do that tonight. They will show the fans a real game, a real struggle, a real battle.

The Bruins have been beaten for five straight games. But they have not lost a game since they were beaten by the Americans on Jan. 17. They have won three of the last four games.

The Bruins have a record of 13 wins, 10 losses, and 1 tie. The Americans have a record of 12 wins, 11 losses, and 1 tie.

JOE STECHER, king of the scissors and former heavyweight champion of the world, is picked to defeat Joe Malcewicz, Utica Panther, tonight at the Arena when the pair clash in the feature bout of an all-star wrestling tournament.

Malcewicz has always been one of the pets of Boston wrestling fans. He endeavored himself to fair play by his grunting three hours draw with Ed Strangler Leas at Braintree Field two weeks ago. His battle against Gus Sonnenberg was a battle against a former champion. He has been a consistent winner in local rings, but Stecher is slight favorite to defeat him tonight.

For the past three years, the former soldier has been beating all comers in Boston, but even his youth, speed and science are not expected to carry him past the deadly body scissors of the former champion.

ROCKE BATTLE AT ARENA

The best hockey double-header of the amateur season will be played tomorrow night at the Arena. Montreal Atlantica, leaders of the Southern New Brunswick League and regarded as the outstanding team of the Maritime Provinces, will tackle University Club in the main event.

Scott Hopes to Win Big Amateur Show Feb. 3 on Foul at Miami

By DAVIS J. WALSH
International News Service Special Editor

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—Unless his manager is deceiving me in a very unfair manner, Philip Scott is going right down there in Miami and win gloriously from Jack Sharkey—on a foul.

This, anyhow, seemed to be the substance of the remarks shortly after the arrival of his ship on the liner Homeric. He didn't say that he was sure to win on a foul. He merely expressed his confidence in this outcome. In fact, he seemed reconciled to it.

Mr. Johnston's outburst was prompted by the writer's suggestion, offered in a moment of inspired aphorism, that Scott wouldn't have to fight a foul at Miami, even if he was hit no higher than the neck.
